

THE HYPE IS

NATIVE ART: Those natives, they used to be so happy-go-lucky, always ready with a smile. So musical too. As long as a fella had a full puku and a guitar, he could keep himself amused for hours. These days all they do is complain. And they're so demanding. We were thus delighted

to see that one of their young ones, Angela

Colbert, has put together a lovely exhibition of

photographs

celebrating all that's good about her

traditional culture.

Authentic carved

wooden meeting house

clocks, genuine plastic

tiki salad servers, chubby faced wahine dolls.

Entitled Kiwitown, you can see it at Te Tuhi – The Mark gallery in Pakuranga, Auckland until the end of the month. So quaint.
